Complaining Doesn't Fix the Hazard

Anybody can point out what's wrong. The question is: What are you going to do about it? If the setup isn't right, don't just complain about it—stop and fix it. If you see a hazard, speak up and help eliminate it. If you need another set of hands, ask for them.

Complaining without action creates noise. Speaking up with a solution creates a safer crew.

Takeaway: See it. Say it. Then do something about it.
